
Inwood Laboratories v. Ives Laboratories

456 U.S. 844 (1982)

The U.S. Supreme Court established standards for contributory infringement and functionality in trademark cases in this case involving the appearance of the prescription drug capsules of Cyclospmol.More

456 U.S. 844 (1982)

The U.S. Supreme Court established standards for contributory infringement and functionality in trademark cases in this case involving the appearance of the prescription drug capsules of Cyclospmol.